WHO IS ANGELO CHINEMERE?:

Angelo was born Onyebuchi Ahunam, in Jos Plateau State North Central part of Nigeria on the 11th of October 1986. The fifth in the family of nine. He was baptized in the Roman Catholic as Michael. Later in his life he had changed his surname to Lawrence after his grandfather in place of Ahunam his great grandfather. His stage name "Angelo" was inspired by his young fantasies about Mafias due to his admiration for Italian-Americans in the Hollywood Mafia movies. At the age of six he was relocated by his parents to live with his maternal grandmother in his hometown. All his childhood was with his grandmother who would always take him to the farm throughout every school vacation periods. And she had this world receiver they took with them every time to the farm which played a role in building Angelo's interest in music. As a child he would work on the farmland while listening to the music the small radio played from 94.4 Orient Fm, a radio station located in Owerri, the capital city of Imo state about 30klm from his hometown, South East of Nigeria.

After his primary education, Angelo went back to the North, spent about three years and then back again to the South East with his mother who decided to relocate to Owerri with the rest of his siblings after the death of Angelo's father in 1999. Showing his passion for music everywhere he went, Angelo wouldn't pay attention in classes, always discussing music or making freestyles with his gangs which often resulted in trouble between him and some class teachers. When he finished his secondary school, Angelo moved to Lagos, the center of entertainment in Nigeria in pursuit of his music career. There, he had met with some four guys he became friends with. They all had same passion for music which had led them to form a band of three rappers and a singer. Jemiz, Enemiez and Angelo would rap while Nett sang. Although, Angelo was the youngest of the crew he played a major role in running of the band which they named "Venom". Enemiez had left the group while the other three kept the fire burning. They renamed themselves Zone X due to the hardcore nature of their music then. They recorded and released their first single "Hard On Me" which was well received underground, but couldn't make a major hit because of some management issues. Later the other two felt frustrated and gave up music but Angelo did not. He went solo and started recording demos during when some critics noted that he first sounded like Eminem and then later like Ludacris. Trying to create his own style of rap he enjoyed listening to many rappers. It has been said by many that Angelo's recent vocals sound almost drawl like Snoop Dogg who they take to be his major influence. Today Angelo has made himself known in the music world with a single track titled "Don't Let Them" with his friend, a passionate singer, Stills. His maternal uncle Sampeace Brown a top musician based in Europe had heard the song and approved of it as a good music that would definitely make a hit. Same way the song had been receiving several good comments from the day it was recorded. Angelo's brand new hit single is handled and published through Street Solid T-Kay Records Scandinavia.
